Dear Roger,

When I lemned that Hood decided to turn the Lifton threats over to their law firm in Baltimore I decided to ask the librarian if he'd like to borrow the copy of your book I have pending getting the complete one you said you'd send later. He said he thought he would better read it and then send it to the lawyers. So I took my copy in and left it for him at the library. He'll copy it and I can then pick mine up. Or maybe he said he'd send it right away, without reading it.

In the event they or the lawyers want to reach you I do not have your office address, phone or fax numbers.

From your saying Lifton has preserved his LA apartment I take it from the new address that he has an office or shares one with someone.

When he sees what you have done I fear he may cross the line. I dropped Ray Marcus a note suggesting he may want to keep tabs because Lifton may need help again.

He knew from my letters that he has nowehre to go if his record gets any attention.

If his claque sees what you record so well, what claque can he hope to have?

What will happen to his fame?

His repuation?

To him!

You have really done it and put it masterfully!

Having had no contact with him in years I did not believe I was really in a position to judge but I'd felt from what he wrote me that he was edgy and knew he had no answers to any legit. criticism.

Thus I think he may now have problems.

Best,

Harold
